

I would like to state that I am in full support of LNP (Local Number Portability) for wireless carriers. The previous company I worked for, GCI Communications in Anchorage Alaska, was only able to enter the Local Market as a CLEC because of LNP and because LNP was enacted as a requirement of the Incumbant LEC. GCI was the most succesful CLEC in all of the US by garnering over 30% of the ILEC lines. Wireless carriers such as Cricket Communications, that are modeled as a "Wireless CLEC" would benefit the consumers greatly by being allowed to enact LNP so that consumers could keep their wireline number when porting it to a wireless one. This would enhance the spirit of competition as originally intended by the FCC for the Local markets; both wireline and wireless CLECS.

Thank you.
